David is a partner in Fogler, Rubinoff LLP's Litigation and Dispute Resolution Group. He maintains a litigation practice with a focus on construction law, real estate disputes, shareholder and partnership disputes.

David has successfully represented clients before the Ontario Superior Court of Justice, Divisional Court, Small Claims Court, arbitration panels, and adjudications under the Construction Act. In these legal settings, David has represented commercial landlords and tenants, property managers, purchasers and vendors of residential and commercial properties, shareholders, partners, mortgagees, mortgagors, subcontractors, suppliers, architects, engineers, general contractors, design builders, construction managers, owners of construction projects and land developers.

In addition to his litigation practice, David drafts and negotiates construction contracts on behalf of public and private owners, general contractors, design builders, construction managers, subcontractors, suppliers, and consultants in all sectors of the construction industry (infrastructure, commercial, industrial, and residential).

Prior to joining the firm as a partner, David summered, articled and was an associate at the firm and was also legal counsel at a major Canadian general contractor, design-builder, and construction manager. These experiences enable him to provide creative solutions and a real-world perspective to the challenges faced by his clients.

David's practical approach, strong analytical skills, and dedication to achieving effective solutions make him a trusted advocate for his clients, consistently guiding them through complex legal challenges with confidence.

Outside of the office David enjoys spending time with his family, playing golf, hockey and travelling.
